

Fennel and the Thirsty Flowers

A story about God's care for His creation

This story happens in the Garden Glade and the Meadow, where Fennel visits all the beautiful flowers God created.

Fennel loved the Garden Glade. Every morning, he walked through the flowers God had made—red ones and yellow ones, purple ones and white ones.

“Look at all the beautiful flowers!” Fennel said to his friend Chirp the sparrow.

“Chirp chirp!” sang Chirp happily.

But one hot day, something was wrong. The flowers were drooping down, down, down. Their leaves looked sad.

“Oh no!” said Fennel. “The flowers look so thirsty!”

Fennel and Chirp looked up at the sky. No rain clouds. No rain for many days.

“I know!” said Fennel. “I’ll get them water!” He found his watering can and filled it from the brook. He poured water on one flower. Then another. Then another.

But there were SO many flowers! And the watering can was SO small!

“This isn’t working,” Fennel said. “I can’t help all these flowers by myself.”

Fennel looked down at the drooping flowers. Then he looked up at the sky.

"I just remembered something," said Fennel. "Who MADE these flowers?"

"GOD did!" "And who makes the RAIN fall?" "GOD does!"

Fennel smiled. “Then let's ask God to help!”

Fennel and Chirp bowed their heads. Fennel prayed:

“Dear God, You made these beautiful flowers. They are very thirsty and we can't help them. Please send rain to help Your flowers. Amen.”

Fennel and Chirp looked up at the sky. Dark clouds were coming!

PLINK! PLONK! PLINK! Rain began to fall! The flowers drank and drank. They stood up tall again. Their colors grew bright.

“God heard our prayer!” said Fennel. “Thank You, God, for sending the rain and taking care of Your flowers!”

The End!

*Look at the flowers!
They don't work or worry.
But God takes care of them and makes them beautiful.
If God takes care of the flowers,
He will take care of you too!*
